The Coal Question!

Notice to our Customers

The price of coal will advance at the mines at least 50c. per ton at the rate of 10c. per month beginning May 1st next.

Both the United States and Canadian railways, notwithstanding the advanced freight of last year, have not been able to meet running expenses for months past.

The probabilities are that freight rates will be advanced in the near future still higher. Therefore there is no cheap coal in sight.

We urge our customers to lay in their next winter's supply at once before we have to advance prices.

THE COUNTY MEMORIAL

To the Editor of the Napanee Express :

Mr. Editor,—

As one of the fathers who lost a son in the war, I wish to say that I do not favor a memorial hall, but I do favor a monument of some kind. The least our county can do is to erect a handsome monument in some prominent place in the county and to engrave on it all the names of the Lennox & Addington boys who made the great sacrifice. Anyone who would oppose such a monument being erected at the public expense is not worthy to be reconed among the citizens of this good old County.

FRANK SIMPKINS.

Mr. Editor :—

Four of my sons went overseas with the Canadian forces, all endured the hardships of life in the trenches and one gave his life for his country. I have read with interest the correspondence in the papers over the question of a memorial and was surprised to learn that there was one man in this county who is unwilling to spend a cent toward erecting a monument to our dear boys who freely shed their blood for him. I am a poor man and a ratepayer and have already contributed to every patriotic cause that has appealed to me for assistance, yet I am willing to give, if necessary, more than my proportion towards a suitable monument to our brave soldier lads. I think I voice the feeling of all the parents of our fallen heroes when I say that it would be an eternal disgrace to the County if the County Council did not erect a memorial of which we will all be proud.

Yours very truly,

ERNEST WALKER.

Mr. Editor :—

It is a delicate matter for parents who, like myself, have lost their only children in the war, to take any part in the discussion of the memorial question, although I know no one who has better right to be heard. In my opinion no attention whatever should be paid to anyone who is heartless enough to suggest that no memorial should be erected. There should be a memorial, one that will endure for all time, and it should be erected by the County Council. This is my opinion and I believe every bereaved father and mother in the county will say the same thing.

FRED W. LAUGHLIN

Mr. Editor :—

Mr. Henry Davy, of Enterprise, in his letter published in last week's Beaver, asks the G. W. V. A. to acquit Mr. W. H. Vannest of slandering the good people of Enterprise because as he says more than half of the people living within five miles of Enterprise are not in favor of a Memorial Hall. Mr. Davy is wide of the mark and evidently did not read Mr. Vannest's first letter to the Beaver or the reply of the Veterans thereto. The Veterans have no quarrel with Mr. Vannest over the question of a Memorial Hall. What they do object to is the statement that the prominent people about Enterprise are opposed to a memorial of any kind. Mr. Vannest is the only man in the county, so far, who has come out and said he was opposed to a memorial of any kind. In all ages and in all countries, civilized or uncivilized, respect for the dead has been the universal rule. Monuments of some kind have always been erected to commemorate deeds of valor.

How easy it is to forget. The treaty of peace is not yet signed and we have already one man in Lennox & Addington who has forgotten that 50,000 Canadian lads are sleeping in France and Flanders. Why were these precious lives sacrificed? Why did 800 Lennox & Addington boys cross the seas to risk their lives in the most cruel war of all ages? Is it possible that some people do not yet know that it was to save the lives, liberty, honor and property of those left behind, including Mr. Vannest? Is it possible that the good people of Lennox & Addington are so ungrateful and so penurious that they are willing to forget these sacrifices and when the question of a memorial is raised, begin to count the cost? If the boys of the allied nations had stopped to count the cost not only in dollars and cents, but in good red blood, Mr. Vannest would not have had any farm upon which to pay taxes and would not have been privileged to earn a snug commission in selling Victory Bonds; but some nice greasy Hun would be lording it over his comfortable home. The veterans of Napanee are not advocating any special form of memorial but they are unanimously in favor of a memorial of some kind. They have too much respect for their fallen comrades to decline to bear their proportion of the expense of a monument to their memory. The veterans are doing their best to get back again into civil life and to forget the horrors of war: but they do not want to forget the brave lads they have left behind. It is their wish that the heroes of Lennox & Addington sleeping in Flanders' fields should be kept swwet and fresh and that the universal custom of erecting a suitable monument should be followed. No matter what Mr. Vannest says about the prominent people of Enterprise, it was inconceivable to the veterans that he knew what he was talking about when he said they were opposed to a memorial of any kind. Mr. Vannest is entitled to express his own views, even if they are of no credit to him, but he has no right to slander his neighbors. The people of Lennox & Addington as a whole are loyal and generous; they have demonstrated it on many occasions and the great mass of them appreciate the great sacrifices made on their behalf and will gladly support the county council in erecting a suitable memorial.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Edward Ellis Instantly Killed in the Methodist Church at Enterprise

On Friday evening last Enterprise and vicinity was visited by one of the severest electric storms experienced in years.

During the storm Messrs Allen Carscallen and Edward Ellis were standing in the church near the door when a bolt of lightning struck the church. Mr. Ellis was instantly killed and Mr. Carscallen was stunned and injured. Mr. Carscallen's clothes were torn and one boot torn completely off of his foot and his foot badly split open.

Mr. Ellis leaves a wife, two daughters and a son to mourn his untimely death. Mr. Ellis' funeral took place on Sunday afternoon and the church was crowded with friends and sympathizers.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the grief stricken family.

The church was not badly injured, a hole in the roof and a few minor damages was the only result of the bolt.

Mr. Carscallen is doing nicely and will soon be around again.

END NOT YET IN SIGHT

Both Sides Stand Firm in Winnipeg Strike.

Sympathetic Strike Must Be Called Off Before Negotiations Will Be Commenced, Declare the Committee of Employers, Who Have the Backing of the Citizens. But Strike Leaders Refuse to Yield.

WINNIPEG, June 10. — Despite pressure from union men representing the faction demanding settlement of the Winnipeg general strike, the Central Strike Committee has declined to call off the sympathetic walkout. It also was intimated that such action by the committee probably would have led to adjustment of the general labor controversy.

W. B. Lanigan, chairman of the conciliation committee of the Railroad Brotherhoods, announced Sunday that individuals were that there could be no settlement before next week. The Brotherhood executive obtained settlement propositions from both the Metal Trades Council and the industrial employers, but the employers, with the Federal, Provincial and municipal Governments solidly behind them, insisted that peace cannot come until the sympathetic strike, termed the leading weapon of the One Union promoters, had been repudiated.

"Instead of going back we are extending the strike. Let no one think of starting work next week. No local will go back, but will try hard to pull out one or two thousand workers who to-day are unorganized," said the Western Labor News, the official organ of the strikers in its latest issue.

Statements were made at the City Hall and at the Board of Trade, where the Citizens' Committee of 1,000 has headquarters, that the action of the labor leaders indicated their determination to stake their fortunes on the fate of their sympathy strike act.

Winnipeg was orderly Sunday. There were no parades, although union agitators protested against Charles F. Gray's proclamation prohibiting such demonstrations. The only gathering of importance was a strikers' meeting at which Labor mayor was leading speaker. Two days ago strike demonstrants attempted to assault Mr. Gray, however, he went to the meeting at Victoria Park alone.

The mayor denounced the sympathetic strike of Hamilton employes and the efforts of the union leaders to control the Winnipeg food supply. He insisted that he was not "anti-labor" but was a friend of honest union labor as he was a bitter enemy of anarchy and Bolshevism."

"I have been pressed time and again to issue a proclamation calling upon the military to act, but I refused," said the mayor, "for I believe people that such action was not necessary."

The statement was applauded.

"The Labor News says I am a crazy man. When this thing is over and you know the facts, you will think God you got an idiot in the executive's chair."

Asked what would be done if labor men decided to parade in opposition to the proclamation, the mayor replied: "We will stop the parade."

R. E. Bray, leader of the minority returned soldier faction, which has been supporting the strike, announced that a union committee considering the parade problem, "decided there would not be any more parades, and that if a parade was attempted the marchers will have to pass over the dead bodies of the committee."

While strike leaders Sunday were appealing to wavering union men to stand firm, "because a settlement is in sight," the Citizens' Committee of one thousand announced that the sympathetic strike phase of the industrial deadlock "will be fought out to a knockout."

The industrial employers declined to approve, as a basis of settlement, the collective bargaining plan suggested by the mediating Railway Brotherhoods' executives, it was announced. The metal trades accepted the plan last week.

Declarations were made at the Board of Trade that hundreds of men and women would resign when the this week, "now that returned soldiers have eliminated the weapon of intimidation." Union leaders, however, asserted the "striking forces are standing firm."

British "Bobbies" to Leave Unions.

LONDON, June 10.—In the House of Commons Saturday Rt. Hon. E. Shortt, Home Secretary, who asserted that the Police Union had broken the agreement entered into last August and which was associated with the extremist policy, stated that the Government had definitely decided that the present state of things could not continue. The Government, he said, would set up a statutory body under which every policeman would be entitled to take his grievances to the highest authority. Members of the force would be called from the Police Union, and men insisting on remaining would cease to be policemen.

Australian Navy Gets Destroyers.

LONDON, June 10.—The British Government has handed over the destroyers Anzac, Swordsman, Tattoo, Stalwart, Success and Tasmania to Australia. The Anzac is the squadron leader, and the others are also of the latest type. The terms upon which the war vessels were handed over have not been disclosed. The Australian navy will man and maintain them.

PEACE AGAIN DELAYED

Allies Are Preparing Reply to Teutonic Delegates.

Germany Will Probably Be Assured Security Equal to Members of the League of Nations, Although Her Request for Admittance May Not Be Considered at Once — Other Changes Are Mentioned.

PARIS, June 10.—The Council of Four, with Premier Orlando of Italy absent, held another short session at the "White House" Sunday on the reply to the German counter-proposals.

While no agreement has been reached by the allies on the reply to the counter-proposals, it is believed that M. Clemenceau and Premier Lloyd George will come to an understanding before the end of the week, perhaps Thursday.

Nearly all the commissions to which were entrusted consideration of the different German proposals are ready to report. After the adoption of a general report by the Council, it is believed that a compromise will be reached on the time to be given the Germans to decide whether they will sign the treaty.

It is known that M. Clemenceau desires to hold the Germans to a short interval, perhaps no more than twenty-four hours, while Mr. Lloyd George desires giving them a week for consideration of the Council's reply.

Although called by another name and not officially admitted, the fact remains that there will be substantial revision of the German treaty, and several points on which the Teutons laid emphasis will approach a form calculated to make them more acceptable to the defeated enemy and more workable.

Much uncertainty was removed Sunday when the Big Four, after a long session, agreed to adopting a definite policy in the matter, agreed that changes in the original terms to be made. Assurances are given that no principles are to be affected and that the amendments will deal only with phraseology, but that is a matter of opinion, for in several instances the changes go sufficiently deep to justify a liberal view of the modification formula, while other changes are so slight as to warrant the statement that they involve only the wording.

Action is imminent on the German request that Germany be admitted to the League of Nations. It is improbable that she will be accepted in full membership at once, but in return for her compliance with the terms for a skeleton army it is certain that a compensating measure of security will be assured to her. This is by far the most important decision yet reached. As to the limitation of armies and international reparations committee, it is likely the commission will be charged with establishing a fixed sum for Germany to pay.

While it is fair to say that distinct progress has been made in respect to the German counter-proposals, and equally true that immediate danger of a serious crisis is greatly reduced, there is by no means in mind that arguments in the matter have not been closed, and that the issues are still grave between the pro- and anti-revisionists.

It is believed there is a strong party in the British delegation in favor of accepting the demand for Germany's admission to the League of Nations, to the extent of fixing a date before the end of the year when Germany may be admitted.

SOCIALIST SOLD HIMSELF.

Man Who Betrayed Nurse Cavell Will Stand Trial.

PARIS, June 10.—Gaston Quien, a Socialist deputy of Lille, who, it is believed, played a prominent part in the betrayal of Miss Edith Cavell, who was executed by the Germans at Brussels in October, 1915, will be placed on trial next month.

A long preliminary inquiry, conducted by Capt. Faure, of the Sixth Military Court, established that Quien was serving a sentence in the jail at Cherbourg in 1914, and was liberated when the Germans first took the town. It is said he entered the German service as a spy and got employment in the hospital established at Brussels. Soon after he began to work there, it is said, Miss Cavell was arrested and executed. Quien was afterwards sent to Switzerland as an invalid.

Sixty witnesses have been called to testify in the trial. They include Princess Maria of Croy, who also was denounced to the Germans by Quien and Madame Bovard, who was tried at the same time as Miss Cavell.

Refuse To Go to Isolation Camp.

PLYMOUTH, June 10.— Fifteen hundred British troops in Gen. Allenby's force in Egypt and Palestine, who returned here Saturday night aboard the Australian liner Ballarat, in Mesopotamia, Palestine and the Balkans, refused to entrain for an isolation camp. The order was given because six cases of smallpox had been discovered during the voyage to England. The soldiers who had entrained left the station and the others refused to enter. The authorities finally gave way and the men went to demobilization centres instead of the isolation camp.

Lloyd George a Good Singer.

Unknown to many people is the fact that Premier Lloyd George is the possessor of quite a charming baritone voice, and any spare moments he can snatch are devoted to a little home music. He always sings in Welsh, and his voice has that peculiar quality found only in the Celt. Before leaving for Paris some of his scanty leisure was devoted also to French conversation. The Premier reads in French quite fluently, but, like many other people, his French conversation lacks fluency. He has made quite remarkable progress, however, in a very short time. But, of course, as a Welshman and bilinguist he has the gift.

CRERAR CAUSED PANIC.

Western Unionists In Difficulties Over the Budget.

OTTAWA, June 10. — The Western Unionist caucus Monday did not result in any concerted action on the part of those whose political future has been jeopardized by the resignation of Hon. T. A. Crerar. The former Minister of Agriculture was present, and explained his position. He felt that the concessions made by the budget to Western sentiment were insignificant, and that much more could have been done without affecting the industrial prosperity and stability of Canada.

It was evident that nearly all the Western members except Mr. Crerar desire to retain the present Government in power. J. A. Maharg, Maple Creek, was the only other member of the caucus who definitely announced his intention of opposing the Government, and who declared that he would do so even if an election was precipitated. While the vast majority desire to support the Government, they fear for their political future. Many would be delighted to see others of their Western colleagues with the Government while they themselves would have leave to do the opposite. Some of the members who declined to be one member expressed it, "he did not propose to be a goat to put a halo around the heads of others," who could then come out on their conditions from a national outlook.

Mr. Crerar must accept responsibility for the embarrassment of the Prairie members. It is doubtful if he realizes the responsibility he must assume, if he had accepted the budget as the best possible under our financial and industrial conditions his colleagues from the West knew or they made exceptions would have done so. Mr. Crerar's resignation has not convinced the members from the prairie that the budget is satisfactory, but has left them as to the effect his opposition will have in the West. It is estimated that discontent will affect at least half a dozen defections from the Government ranks, and probably twice this number.

Monday, Hon. A. L. Sifton declared that the budget was acceptable to him. He intimated that if anybody on the Opposition side had a budget proposal that would raise the requisite revenue and better meet the conditions in this country at present the Government would be glad to hear of it.

CANADIANS KNIGHTED.

Three Fighting Men Receive Titles From King George.

LONDON, June 10. — The following general promotions have been announced:—

Knight Commander of the Bath—Maj.-Gen. Loomis.

Knight Commanders of St. Michael and St. George—Maj.-Gen. Morrison and Maj.-Gen. Burstall.

Maj.-Gen. Loomis is a native of Montreal. He entered the Canadian Expeditionary Forces at the commencement of the war, and as he had considerable militia experience, was given the command of the Second Brigade, which he commanded in France for a time. He was later appointed commander of the Third Division.

Prior to the war Maj.-Gen. Burstall was in the Militia Department. He is an artilleryman by training, but upon going overseas was made commander of the Second Division.

Maj.-Gen. Morrison, the present chief of the Canadian Artillery, went overseas as a brigadier of artillery and was promoted to be chief of this arm of the service. He is a native of Ottawa, and prior to going overseas was editor of the Ottawa Citizen. He won the D.S.O. in South Africa.

LITTLE HOPE REMAINS.

Fear That Canadian Airman Was Lost at Sea.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Fear that Capt. Mansell R. James, the Canadian aviator, who has been missing since he made a flight from Lee, Mass., a week ago last Thursday, has been lost at sea, was deepened Monday by testimony received from Waterbury, Conn., persons reported to the Aero Club that they saw, about two o'clock on the day of James' disappearance, a machine fitting his description flying high and fast on a southeasterly course.

Creditable testimony that the flyer was observed over Bethany, near New Haven, Conn., had been received previously. In view of the latest evidence, Dr. J. A. James, of Carthage, N.Y., father of the boy, seeking a clue to the mystery of his nephew's disappearance, was forced to believe he crossed the Sound somewhere between New Haven and Bridgeport, attempting to reach Atlantic City without stop, and found himself over the ocean with an empty gasoline tank.

SETBACK FOR CARSON.

His Candidate Defeated In Three-cornered Contest.

LONDON, June 10.—In the Parliamentary election held Monday for the vacant seat in East Antrim, Ireland, a defeat of the regular Unionist candidate, which the party had taken for granted, was received. The victor was Mr. Hanna, Independent Unionist, who polled 8,714 votes, against 7,549 for Mr. Moore, Unionist, and 1,778 for Mr. Legg, Liberal.

The workingmen largely supported Mr. Hanna. Friends of Sir Edward Carson had announced that he would resign the leadership of the Unionist party unless Mr. Moore was elected.

In the last Parliamentary election of the eastern division of Antrim, Brig.-Gen. Hon. H. C. McCalmont, Unionist, polled 15,206 votes, as compared with 861 votes for D. Dumigan, the Sinn Fein candidate. Gen. McCalmont, Mr. Dumigan were the only candidates.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, June 10.—With the 2400 cattle on the local market yesterday was slow, about 75c per cwt. lower than last week's prices on all classes of cattle. At this decline most of the cattle were sold to packers. The prevailing opinion is that with liberal supplies of cattle the prices will go still lower.

Good milch cows and springers are wanted and are commanding good prices.

In the small stiff with a run of 653 calves the market held fairly steady, but the sheep and lambs had a bad break, the lambs losing $1 to $2 a piece, and the sheep $1 a cwt.

The hog trade with a run of 1729 head sold at 22c fed and watered, but the packers' quotations during the week are 21¾c fed and 20¾c f.o.b.

Boy Killed by Lightning.

WOODBRIDGE, June 10.—One boy was killed, another injured, and four men knocked unconscious when a tree under which the party had taken shelter during the storm, was struck by lightning Sunday afternoon. The two boys, sons of Mr. Blanchard, were visiting Mr. Wilbert Blanchard. In the afternoon the boys, aged five and seven, with Mrs. Blanchard and three other women, went to the woods for flowers, and when the hail and rain storm commenced took shelter under a tree. The injured lad was badly burned, but will recover. The boy's father was killed overseas. Their home is at 1212 King street west, Toronto.

Did Grafters Make Profit When St. Paul's Was Built In the Seventeenth Century

It might have been that architects of the seventeenth century had twentieth century ideas when the workmanship on St. Paul's Cathedral in London was being done. The people of Britain are beginning to believe modern contractors' methods were pursued in much of the work done on the famous edifice at the time Sir Christopher Wren worked out the plans of the structure. The investigation of those repairing the decaying portions of the church have evidence that "shoddy" material crept in and what seems to have been solid workmanship and huge stones are turning out to be mere shells with the core filled with a poor grade of cement.

Throughout the war the reconstruction of the cathedral has been going on, and as the work progresses British architects, who at first thought the gradual sinking of the structure due to the enormous weight of the dome, are beginning to shake their heads and look back through the available history to find just who was working on the edifice during the forty years Sir Christopher's eye watched its construction.

The London Times has this to say of the recent findings:

"Another discovery was the fact that a great many of the carved capitals were not fixed properly, but were copies insecurely fixed with clamps, dowels and lead. In many instances the 'fine Roman manner' and meant himself 'to build for eternity.'

"That he was imposed on by some of his contractors is quite likely. We know there were eight or nine and all of the same excellency as the Strongs.

"A still further discovery was that the piers were built on setoffs; that is, the masonry was reduced in area as the building gained height. The foundations are set on a bed of very hard clay, and consist of two layers of stone, each two feet thick."

Concern as to the durability of the cathedral has been manifested for many years. Huge fissures in the walls have been repaired often, and in 1913 the work of permanent reconstruction of the piers was begun.

Of the site of St. Paul's the history of Britain may be written from before she was known as a nation, but the present structure is only two centuries old. It took two hundred years to build the first church, which fell in ruins, and was succeeded by the present cathedral, which was put up in the record time of forty years. The last stone was laid in 1710, and the first grave sunk was that of the builder, Sir Christopher.

In the eyes of the British it is a hallowed spot. It contains the remains of great national heroes, and has served as a religious and national Mecca since its construction. Rodney, Nelson, Howe, Duncan, Gordon, Napier, Abercromby, Ponsonby, Picton and Wellington all lie there as well as a goodly number of great scholars and painters.

THE "SAM COME-AND-GO" RAID.

How a Canadian Indian Captured a Wee Hun.

The boys called it the "Come and-Go" raid in memory of Pte. Sam Comego, the soldier who made the "show" in midwinter.

The First and Second Canadian Divisions had taken over the Messines-St. Eloi front from the British during the autumn of 1915, and a demonstration was ordered to bluff the enemy from calling reserves from that sector. Brigade raids were ordered first, however, for information. To add zest to the venture the Fourth Brigade hung up an honorarium of 100 francs for the first man to bring back a live German.

Pte. Comego was a great big Chippewa Indian of admirable type from Rice Lake, Ont. His smile overran his copper-hued cheeks and made a friendly impression on every soldier in the 21st Battalion, of which Sam was an original. He was also an original volunteer for this promising raid.

A brief bombardment opened the night "show." Over went the squads. The 21st Battalion raiders, led by Capt. Miller and Lieut. Davidson, leaped into "Jerry's" line to the tune of blood-bleaching war-whoops from the Indian. Frenzied search for dugouts ensued.

Chasing a German round a traverse, Pte. Zacharias discovered a dug-out barred by a sheet of iron. Capt. Miller, Serg. McBride and Pte. Comego pried open the retreat. One lone prisoner emerged. "Come-and-Go" jerked him to his feet, ejaculating one subdued burst of joy. The lone "Jerry" was a mere small-sized boy.

"Say, Sarge, I know that beetle feller," urged Comego. "Sure? His name is 'Beaucoup France'!" And in a trice the Indian had tucked the bewildered midget under his arm and scrambled over the parados.

Eventually, the password "Wisdom," meaning "Get back as best you can," was passed.

In our "home trench" "Come-and-Go" was found holding a reception, with his diminutive prisoner comfortably ensconced, enjoying a rum ration, while to every returning raider the victor waved his honorarium. Then the wee "Jerry" was ordered to the rear.

Largest Island in World Was Divided Three Ways And British Have One Part

NEW GUINEA, had it determined its sovereign powers itself, might be said to have "played both ends against the middle" with a vengeance; for it was divided among Britain, Germany, and neutral Holland.

This island the largest in the world, if Australia be ranked as a continent, and in many respects the most primitive, furnishes one of the perplexing colonial problems before the peace conference.

Conditions in New Guinea, in the period before the war, are described in the following communication from Thomas Barbour:

New Guinea, the last great area remaining in the tropics which is still almost completely unknown, has a peculiar charm for the naturalist.

Dutch New Guinea, the Equator and Queensland, Australia, its length is about 1,490 miles and its maximum breadth 450 miles. Its area is greater than that of Borneo, being about 300,000 square miles. Practically it is divided into three parts.

The lower coast bordering Torres Straits form British Papua as it is now called. The eastern coast as far as 140 degrees 47 minutes east longitude, with a considerable hinterland, goes to make up Kaiser Wilhelm's Land, or German New Guinea. In both of these districts there are a considerable number of white settlements and mission stations; and mining and copra farming are carried on. The great western region of Papua is Dutch and it is of this region that we are dealing especially.

It is this very absence of white folk which gives this land an added interest, for here the native may be seen in his primitive simplicity. With such a bewildering variety of human types among the Papuan tribes, each standing its own language the ethnologist has a great field, one which is certainly unexcelled.

In coming to Papua from Malasia it is the sudden contrast in the people which makes the most startling impression on one's mind. The Malay, grave, reserved, and dignified, is as unlike his New Guinea neighbor as a Chinaman is unlike a European. These islanders are a happy, boisterous lot until some little thing offends them, when they at once become sullen and treacherous; but as we had no occasion to cross them, we got along admirably.

The pure Papuan is very dark brown, usually well-built, thick-set man of medium height. Occasional individuals are seen who are slight, short, and who have strongly marked Negrito characteristics. These are probably representatives of the very earliest human inhabitants of the region, as were the Negritos in the Philippines. Out on the Pacific coast toward German territory the human type is markedly different. Here in a good degree of most people who have characteristics of other island groups to the eastward, for there probably has been accidental colonizations along this shore.

From Wiak it is a short journey to Japen Island, another of the group which lies in the mouth of Geelvink Bay. The people here vary little in appearance from the other Papuans of the region, but their manners and customs differ much from village to village. Indeed, while this island is hardly larger than Long Island, New York, eleven mutually unintelligible languages are spoken on it. Many feuds exist, and when our ship came to anchor off Pom Bay, canoes attracted by the smoke and which had come from neighboring harbors did not spend the night even close to the ship, because their occupants were afraid of the people of Pom.

The raiding canoes of Pom were enormous affairs, with bows decorated with fretwork carving, in elaborate designs, and with wooden heads which were made to look like real ones, by having enormous mops made of cassowary feathers stuck to them.

WILL BROADEN EDUCATION.

Some Points Suggested by Hon. Dr. Cody.

Although education is one of those subjects which, in Canada, have been discussed "right through the war," still, now that the fighting is over, discussion on this all-important question tends to become more practical and immediate. As Walter Bagehot used to insist so emphatically, it is one thing to criticize and propose when one is under no obligation to act on any criticism or proposal, and quite another thing to do so when one is under immediate obligation to translate one's words into acts. During the war every education proposal was launched with at least one postponing clause attached. But to-day any proposal may be practical politics. It is for this reason, amongst others, that the statement recently made by the Hon. Dr. Cody, Minister of Education for Ontario, is specially important. Dr. Cody's statement would at any time have been an interesting contribution to the consideration of a great subject, but as a preliminary statement of actual policy it has, of course, an interest all its own.

Dr. Cody covered a wide field, but it was welcome to find the Ontario Education Minister placing in the very forefront of his statement the question of the more general extension of education beyond the limits of the elementary school. There had come, he insisted, a far more general realisation of the fact that education does not stop with the boy and girl age," and that a further compulsory period should be introduced. Important and essential everywhere, such a provision is unquestionably especially important in Canada, with its very large foreign-born population. If the ideals of Canadian citizenship are to be really and effectively inculcated, much more is called for than the primary education of the boy and the girl. As Dr. Cody well pointed out, it is absolutely necessary that the foreign-born elements shall receive a "real education in British ideals and citizenship."

Then Dr. Cody was emphatic also on the position which women should now be called upon to fill in education. Women, he declared, had won their right to take their share in the councils and government of their country, and in no national activity could they lend their aid with more certain effect than in the matter of education. He hoped to see women everywhere accorded places on school boards and boards of education, and thus enabled to place at the service of their country the special ability which they undoubtedly possessed.

Perhaps the most important of all the points put forward by Dr. Cody was the question of the payment of teachers. Those who really appreciate the unique national importance of education must have recourse, again and again, to this subject, and to the insistence that if the educational profession is to have an outstanding and attract to its ranks the men and women it most needs and ought to demand, the standard of payment must be very much higher even where than it is at the present time. The key to all the problems is indeed the question of the teacher, for that counts, and without good teachers the most perfect system of education must be of little avail. "The time is ripe," Dr. Cody said, "for the people both in city and in country are ready to pay better salaries, and are realizing that a boy is much worth while to spend money for the securing of better conditions under which to develop their children." Those who have been following with any care the recent history of education in Canada and other countries cannot fail to agree with Dr. Cody here. The time has already passed, or is, at any rate, rapidly passing, when any salary may be thought good enough for the school teacher, and it can scarcely be questioned that an education body courageous enough to pay its teachers adequately, to-day, can count upon very wide and sincere popular support.

TAPPING THE NEW NORTH.

Span Over Peace River Is Link of Civilization.

It is seldom that the term "halfway house" may properly be applied to a bridge, but such is the case with one of the largest now in course of Edmonton and Dunvegan Railway, at Peace River, formerly Peace River Crossing, Alberta.

For three hundred miles down stream to the eastward of its spans and for exactly the same distance up towards the Rockies river is not navigable. Thus it links all dwellers near the stream with civilization, for the southern terminus is Edmonton.

"But the line should be extended hundreds of miles northward again, into the heart of the Peace River country," was the statement of no less a Peace River enthusiast than Alfred Wallace Rigney, ninth Marquess of Queensberry.

The Alberta and Dunvegan line is the one whose bond interest payments cannot be met by its western builders and whose acquisition by the Dominion is being urged at Ottawa.

It was learned recently that the railway, with all its wonderful future possibilities, is in good condition. Although new, and indeed built only half-way to its strategic destination, the line is lacking in proper ballast, while the bars are very ramshackle.

Lack of funds is said to be the sole difficulty, as the administrative abilities of Mr. J. D. MacArthur, the head of the company, are not questioned. The Dominion government has guaranteed the bonds to the extent of $20,000 per mile, and is also making representations.

Aside from the financial crisis, the urgency of the case typified by this "in the air" bridge is that the commercial feasibility of oil production in the hinterland depends on northward extension of the steel. Drillers have gone in and are striking oil over there.

Hundreds of settlers have also trekked in ahead of the railway, homes are broken in considerable acreage and are producing fine grains.

"It is a bit of paradise," said Lord Queensberry in enthusiastic exclamation, after describing the possibilities of the district. "The town of Peace River itself is thriving and has two weekly newspapers, each equipped with power plant and modern composing machinery. Nearer the mountains there is gold-quartz ore in which I have every confidence.

"The nearer to the Mackenzie river one gets, the better are the oil prospects," he added, pointing to a copy of the Peace River Record which reported his activities in boring for oil in 1871. Princess Patricia's marriage is felt generally to be in keeping with the spirit of the age, and, far from insisting upon royalty, she is dropping her own title, as she takes the name of her husband, while on his side it has not been thought necessary to give him a step up to equalize things. In 1871 great efforts were made to popularize the marriage of Princess Louise, but there were numbers of people who shook their heads, wondered what the world was coming to when royal blood left imperial royal and firmly believed that the default of issue to the marriage was a judgment upon so great an innovation.

The English Badger.

It is a general belief that the badger is dying out, but proof of the presence of badgers in a tract of woodland that lies about midway between two Dorset streams was unexpectedly provided recently. A local pack of foxhounds, out cubhunting, were led to an "earth" where a fox had taken refuge. Digging operations showed that the hole formed the entrance to two separate chambers, from one of which a couple of foxes were drawn, while the other held four badgers, all of which were captured. — Family Herald.

OUR ARCTIC EXPLORER

PEN PORTRAIT OF VILHJALMUR STEFANSSON.

He Had a Narrow Escape From a Business Career, But Became an Adventurer and His Exploits Culminated In the Discovery of the Blonde Eskimos.

THROUGH the medium of the American-Scandinavian Review the reader is presented with an interesting pen portrait of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the famous Arctic explorer, who is acknowledged to be the foremost scientist-explorer of the world. The writer, John Holmes, prefaces his sketch of the explorer's life and personality as rendered to him in a recent interview by a few introductory remarks, in which he refers to the affinity between the ancient Norse Vikings and the modern explorer—both possessing in an unusual degree a fearless desire for travel and adventure. Although by parentage an Icelander, Stefansson is by birth a Canadian. The famous explorer Mr. Holmes found to be "a modest, soft-spoken person with the mild and thoughtful manner often characteristic of those who have accomplished big things."

"There is a touch of the academician in his speech and gestures, and the only scars he bears of his battles with the North are patterns of furrows around the eyes, such as you might find adding good humor to the countenance of any Western rancher who has lived much in the open where the winds are never still. He is of good, medium height with a well-knit frame and the fair complexion and light-colored hair characteristic of the Icelanders, perhaps the fairest of the Scandinavian peoples.

"He gives no such impression of dynamic force or physical vigor as his great fellow explorers, Amundsen, Shackleton or Peary, when the North Pole discoverer was in his prime. Yet I believe that Stefansson has commanded as large expeditions as any of these men, and he has undoubtedly tramped greater distances around the top of the earth than any other man. I remember one time wherein lay his strength, and almost before I knew it I had my answer.

"In the course of our talk I thoughtlessly questioned the literalness of something he had said about his polar experiences. Well, I struck flint at once. He thought, of course, that I doubted his word, and I am glad he did. I caught a glimpse of his reserve strength when he was roiled, of the steel under the velvet.

"Stefansson belongs by right to the select log cabin class of famous men, now becoming almost as rare as buffalo in the plains. He was born in 1879 in an immigrant's cabin on the shore of Lake Winnipeg, north of the Canadian city of that name. His parents were among the first Icelanders to venture from their native island to try their fortunes in the New World. They moved in a prairie schooner across the line into what was then the Territory of Dahoka. When the future explorer was eighteen months old they settled in a farming colony of Icelandic immigrants near the hamlet of Mountain, Pembina County. Here Stefansson grew up on his father's farm twenty miles from a railroad. The country was wild enough to harbor a few Indian bands, and every now and then the colony was stirred by reports of impending raids. Sitting Bull was still alive, and to the Icelanders he was a sort of American troll, which never materialized, however, in their midst.

"The environments of Stefansson's early youth were those characteristic of a Western Frontier community, bare in comfort, abounding in hard work and almost stripped of cultural advantages, except such as may be found on the bookshelves of the most poverty stricken Icelander, the saga classics, a few epic ballads, rimur—and, of course, the Icelandic poets.

"Does any nation owe as much to its classics and its poets as the Icelanders? Without the sagas to kindle their spiritual life they would have reverted to semi-barbarism centuries ago. Stefansson devoured his father's little library and the libraries of his neighbors, attended country school, worked on the farm and put in four summers as a cow puncher on the Dakota plains. He lost his father when he was fifteen, and the added responsibilities thrown on his shoulders by this bereavement caused him to take a plunge into business the following year. He made a brave attempt to clean up a small fortune in hay. The farmers of the community had gone wheat mad, he explained. They would raise nothing but wheat, and they gladly gave young Stefansson liberal orders for hay to feed their horses and milch cows through the winter. Stefansson hired men to put up enormous quantities of hay on the range adjoining the farm community, but before he could deliver a ton North Dakota was swept by a blizzard that has never been equalled in the history of the Northwest. Not a wisp of hay could be delivered, and Stefansson went broke.

"Stefansson considers his failure a narrow escape from a business career. But he had other escapes. The log cabin tradition almost pulled him into politics. The pulpit reached out and nearly collared him. Stefansson dodged both callings. The inadequate country schools had not enriched his knowledge a great deal, but they had at least given him a thirst for education, and when he was eighteen he entered the preparatory department of the University of North Dakota. With a capital of $57, his summer earnings, and a grubstake in a brand new suit of store clothes, which cost $7, and a pair of $1.25 shoes, he set off for the state metropolis of Grand Forks. That journey was a memorable event, for, at eighteen, he had never before ridden in a railroad train.

"He then proposed to sail around Alaska to study the Pacific side of the Polar regions. Stefansson preferred a short cut across the Continent to the Mackenzie delta, and induced Harvard and Toronto universities to finance this trip. He traveled by Hudson Bay steamers down the Mackenzie, tramped part of the way, and arrived on the shores of the Arctic Ocean in a light overcoat and a blue serge suit. 'And I knew just exactly what I was doing,' said Stefansson. 'I was going to live with the Eskimos, learn their language and study them; and I did. I could never have done it effectively by putting up my own quarters, dressing as a white man and living like a white man. I ate my Eskimo food and killed game, cooked it myself in the Eskimo huts, ate delicious meals, whenever I was hungry, and stayed for eighteen months.'

"His second Arctic expedition kept him in the Far North for fifty-three months, from 1908 to 1912. This expedition was under the auspices of the Government of Canada. It was on this trip that Stefansson found the blond Eskimos, showing unmistakable signs of European origin, and believed by many to be the remnant of the lost Norse colony of Greenland. In the course of this expedition Stefansson added many new features to the map of Northern Canada, exploring one river, the Horton, more than five hundred miles in length. He commanded the Canadian expedition of 1913-18, from which he has just returned, one of the most elaborately and expensively equipped polar expeditions ever undertaken. He explored and mapped about one-fourth of the 1,000,000 square miles of the hitherto unknown polar region of the Western Hemisphere, found new islands, corrected the outlines of others on the map, and established the non-existence of one island, the discovery of which had been announced some years ago.

"From Stefansson's pen one thing more to tell of Stefansson, and considering the fact that I have already stated that he is an Icelander, it seems almost superfluous to mention that he started out to be a poet. He contributed verse to the college literary monthly in his undergraduate days, and even achieved the distinction of having his translations of Icelandic poems published in the Scandinavian magazine. I have read some of his verse written many years ago, and I can testify to its merit."

THE CARIBOU.

Natural Resources of the Dominion Includes Venison.

In the House of Commons recently Mr. Thompson, member for the Yukon, referred to the immense herds of caribou in Northern Canada. The number has been estimated at twenty-five millions and fifty millions. The difference is great, but no doubt there are difficulties in making an accurate census. An article in the London Times says:—

"Not long ago officers of the United States despatch steamer Gen. Jeff Davis reported that they saw thousands of caribou swimming across the Yukon river between Eagle and Forty Mile posts. At one time, according to one witness, between 3,000 and 5,000 could be seen from the decks of the steamer. There were also uncounted thousands which had gone over the hills or were on their way to the river. For three hours the steamer was navigated with difficulty among the swimming animals. The caribou congregated on islands in the river and along the river bars, and swam on both sides of the steamer. Another witness declared that he walked for 21 miles among the moving herds. 'The mountains,' he said, 'seemed to be alive and moving.' Various other reports sustain the estimates of millions of caribou in the Barren Lands of Canada."

At present the herds are inaccessible except to a few bold explorers and hunters, but as steamboat and railway building move northward it may be necessary to take measures of precaution against the indiscriminate slaughter as destroyed the vast herds of buffalo or bison in Canada and the United States. An immense supply of food is available for our future needs, and this is a part of our national resources which should be carefully conserved.

Ontario School Statistics.

According to the Minister of Education's report for 1918 the attendance during the year was 561,865, divided: Public, 457,616; Separate, 70,048; High schools and collegiate institutes, 29,097; continuation schools, 5,104. There are 5,102 Public Schools, with 11,274 teachers; 548 Separate schools or colleges, with 1,051 teachers; 127 continuation schools, with 241 teachers. The Public school attendance averaged 295,652, an increase of 3,047. Separate schools attendance was 46,919, an increase of 722.

The total expenditure for school purposes was $16,855,421, an average of $6.35 per head for the total population.

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well.

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. I followed her advice and am entirely free from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and I feel sure it will do much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 1421 5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Sometimes there are very serious conditions where a hospital operation is the only alternative, but on the other hand so many women have been cured by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after doctors have said that an operation was necessary—every woman who has a chance to avoid an operation should give it a fair trial before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

If complications exist, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of many years experience is at your service.

An Investor Need Not Be a Capitalist

Many people think it is necessary to have a lot of money in order to invest in high interest-bearing securities.

They envy the Capitalist because he has money to buy bonds and shares that earn him more money without further effort.

But to-day the humblest wage earner can be an investor and get big returns. War Savings Stamps have made it possible.

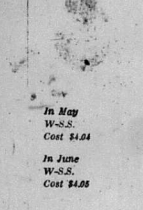
In May W-S.S. Cost $4.04

In June W-S.S. Cost $4.08

You can get a War Savings Stamp for $4.00. It is a Government Bond, bearing interest at over 4½%, and in 1924 will be redeemed for $5.00.

Thrift Stamps help you to save up the $4.00 necessary to get one of these Bonds. A Thrift Stamp costs 25 cents, and sixteen of them can be exchanged for a War Savings Stamp.

Thus you can start being an investor as soon as you have $4.00, and build up as big an investment as you choose.



War Savings Stamps can be bought wherever this sign is displayed.

A WORD OF ENCOURAGEMENT

The above report was furnished The Express by a base ball fan who witnessed the game in Belleville on Wednesday. A close scrutiny of the game, innings by innings, shows that the play was not so one-sided as the score indicates. Over anxiousness and gross errors appear to be two of the main faults, and these may be, and no doubt will be overcome by a little more team play and practice and before the close of the season we predict that our sports loving citizens will be proud of their ball team. The next game in the league series will be played at Picton on Thursday of next week, and we would say to the boys, get busy with lots of practice, and when the next game is pulled off a marked improvement will be shown.

NAPANEE SCHOOL BOARD

The Napanee Board of Education met in regular session in the council chamber on Monday evening, Chairman Mr. Alpine Woods, presiding.

Members present: Messrs A. Woods, P. Gleeson, H. Daly, G. W. Gibbard, C. A. Wiseman, J. Craig, E. J. Pollard, R. G. H. Travers, J. L. Boyes, J. W. Robinson, S. R. Miller.

The minutes of the last regular and special meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the Deputy Minister of Education approving the action of the Board in fixing the hours for instruction in the Public Schools in accordance with local time.

A communication was read from Mr. Moore tendering his resignation as teacher in the Collegiate Institute. On motion the resignation was accepted and the management committee were instructed to advertise for a new teacher to fill the vacancy.

A communication was read from Miss Baker requesting an increase in salary from $1200 to $1400 per year.—Laid on table.

A communication was read the assistant teachers in the Public schools requesting an increase in salary from $700 to $800 per year.—Laid on table.

A communication was read from Mr. W. J. Trenouth requesting an increase in salary from $1300 per year to $1600 per year. Laid on table.

An account of $10 from S. Wilson for cutting wood at the Coll. Inst. was referred to the Property committee with power to act.

On motion the chairman of the supply committee was authorized to purchase a slate board for Miss Mair's room in the west ward school at a cost of about $35.

Mr. McLean addressed the Board in reference to the erection of a memorial to the pupils and teachers of the Collegiate who have given their lives in the war. The pupils already have raised a fund of $245 toward the memorial and will no doubt raise further funds for the object in view. Mr. McLean stated that they already had the promise of two guns captured from the Germans to be placed one on either side of the proposed memorial. Mr. McLean also outlined the style of the proposed monument and requested the appointment of a committee from the Board to work out the details with the staff and arrange for the erection of a memorial. The Board were in hearty accord with the spirit of the school in wishing to erect a monument to the fallen former pupils and appointed a committee to work with the staff in carrying out the memorial. The committee appointed were Messrs H. Daly, W. G. Gibbard, and C. A. Wiseman.

The chairman of the Finance Committee reported several accounts as approved and moved that they be paid. Carried.

The motion of a previous meeting to build new cement in front of the west ward school was rescinded and a motion was passed authorizing the Property committee to have the present walks repaired.

The requests for increases in salary were taken up and on motion the assistant teachers in the public schools who have been in the service of the Board for five years or over will receive $800 per year, an increase of $100 as asked for by them. Teachers who have been on the staff less than five years will receive from $700 to $800 according to the number of years they have been teaching in the schools.

Miss Baker was granted an increase in salary from $1200 to $1400 per year.

Mr. W. J. Trenouth was granted an increase in salary from $1300 to $1500 per year. All increases in salary will date from September 1st.

The property committee were instructed to have an expert from the Smead-Dowd Firm look over the furnaces in the Collegiate and report what repairs are necessary.

The Finance committee were instructed to prepare the estimates for presentation to the town and county councils.

Board adjourned.

THE CRICKET

Nursing Sister Herrington, D.C.M., the distinguished nurse who has been serving with the C.A.M.C. in France has returned to her home in Napanee, Ont. She will be remembered always how this brave lady held discipline and order among the wounded of her hospital under heavy fire, which grand and gallant service she was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal. The only person, we are told, that this brave lady was not awarded the Victoria Cross is that the Victoria Cross cannot be awarded to a woman. Napanee is very proud to be the home town of perhaps the most distinguished woman of the war.

• • • • •

We would hate to think that our population are not grateful to this heroine, but what has been done by way of reception. A good many people don't even know of her arrival! Why?

• • • • •

The roads are getting worn down a little smoother now. We wonder if the council is waiting till they are worn quite away. They aren't altogether idle though, they have begun repairs on one of the worst streets in the town, the head of Bridge street. But to get this done someone ran a farm tractor around in it to make it impassable, and no one was pinched! Now if they get busy on Centre street and East street they can mount the platform smiling at the next nomination meeting.

• • • • •

What is the price of eggs (1) in Napanee? (2) in Toronto?

• • • • •

Some people marvel at the low prices here—people who never go to any other town. We think that we could take you around the town and show you that the high cost of living in Napanee is just as bad as in any city.

• • • • •

We will admit that some Napanee stores are the most reasonable in their prices in Ontario, but others—!

• • • • •

We always buy our meat at the meat shop, but we notice such things as this:—a farmer offering two tiny pigs that could be wrapped in this sheet for sale for only $18. He would rather sell his suckling pigs for that than to kill them later on and bring them in to market at 25c per lb. boo-hoo! alack! alas! the revenue from the butchers' license "has went."

• • • • •

And that is one of the things we can't get off our mind. The low priced meat seems pretty scarce. Last winter we heard scouts of great glee from certain quarters about this. They fell off one by one, the shouters. Now and then we hear an occasional sputter. But rarely can anyone tell us how much the price of meat has fallen since the butchers' license was lifted?

• • • • •

Last year when a neighbor told us that a pair of sucking pigs cost $16 we yelled, "Great Guns!" But the editor refuses to print what we said about the $18 pair!

• • • • •

Question: Will the farmer miss the "Soldiers of the Soil" this year?—and will the S.O.S. miss the farmerette?

• • • • •

We wonder the Bolsheviki movement will reach Napanee. It costs from thirty to fifty cents an hour for ordinary carpet beating labour now. We heard of a lady who paid two men fifty cents to do a half hour's chore! Any spare Bolsheviks ought to settle in Napanee, for the living of the laboring class seems to come mighty easy.

• • • • •

During the hot weather we have almost envied the Hungry Hun who must wear paper clothing.

• • • • •

Buglers are in great evidence in our village. Our slumbers were disturbed the other night by some hearty lunged trumpter trying to blow away his spirit through a bugle. We weren't sure if another war had broken out and this was the call to arms or not. We hope,—like-wise several other citizens, that this ambitious youth will do his bugling in future about noon—and he might take a trip to Kaladar to do it.

• • • • •

Speaking of having our slumbers disturbed. We were once again aroused in the night by a pair of cats singing a duet. Anyone finding a stray number nine, black, button boot may have it in our memoryy.

• • • • •

But of all the midnight disturbers of the peace, which is the easiest to forgive, the cat or the boy?

• • • • •

They say that the sound of a bugle carries for five miles. We can can vouch for its carrying over five blocks.

• • • • •

The automobile speed spotters were quite busy this time last year. What has happened them this year?

• • • • •

Attend the June session of the County Council and demand a memorial to the fallen heroes—and be in at the kill of those who so far forget themselves as to protest against the memorial. This is a chance for the G.W.V.A.

Tom Skeyhill, the Australian soldier poet is the most unique and impelling speaker which the war has produced. Blinded while at the front, American surgeons performed a miracle operation and restored his sight. He is unquestionably the greatest soldier-lecturer of the day.

SELF POISONING VERY PREVALENT

Auto-Intoxication, or Slow Self Poisoning, Cause of Most Ill Health and Disease.

Advanced medical authorities assert that auto-intoxication is the foundation of most of the ills and diseases to which the human flesh is heir.

This condition is nothing more nor less than the slow self-poisoning of the vital organs produced by the excessive mental and physical strain which we are forced to endure, which renders the organs lame and inactive, and permits toxins—actual poisons—to be generated within one's own body.

Usually the trouble starts in the intestines; sometimes it starts in the stomach, liver or kidneys, but in any case the blame lies in the faulty method of living, and may be traced to over eating, excessive nervous mental strain, lack of exercise or other causes. At any rate it is the more important organs that suffer the final damage and when they falter or fail in their duties the body fills up with acids and poisons, and their baneful influences. Bright's disease, heart trouble, high blood pressure, catarrhal affections, and other troubles are frequently the result of self-poisoning or auto-intoxication.

A tired draggy feeling of the body, a sluggish mind, and dull memory; intense nervousness, headache, stomach and bowel troubles, poor circulation, imperfect digestion, constipation and despondency are common symptoms of auto-intoxication, and nine out of ten of the American people are likely to be so affected.

Tanlac, the powerful reconstructive and systemic tonic was designed especially to overcome these very troubles. There is not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful work of this celebrated preparation, which begins its action by stimulating the digestive and assimilative organs, thereby enriching the blood and envigorating the entire system. Composed of the most beneficial herbs and roots known to science, it enables the stomach to thoroughly digest the food, thereby permitting the assimilable products to be converted into blood, bone and muscle. It overcomes that great exciting cause of disease, weakness. It renders the body vigorous and elastic, it keeps the mind clear and energetic, and throws off the symptoms of nervousness and indigestion. It builds up the constitution weakened by disease or mental and physical over-work quickens convalescence of the invalid, and is a sure and unfailing source of comfort to those who are suffering from the effects of nervousness and over work.

That Tanlac does these very things is proven by the fact that it now has the largest sale of any tonic on the American market. Millions have used it with the most astonishing and gratifying results.

Tanlac is sold in Napane at WALLACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. OSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON.

GIRLS! WHITEN YOUR SKIN WITH LEMON JUICE

Make a beauty lotion for a few cents to remove tan, freckles, sallowness.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply you with three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Squeeze the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle, then put in the orchard white and shake well. This makes a quarter pint of the very best lemon skin whitener and complexion beautifier known. Massage this fragrant, creamy lotion daily into the face, neck, arms and hands and just see how freckles, tan, sallowness, redness and roughness disappear and how smooth, soft and clear the skin becomes. A Test. It is harmless, and the beautiful results will surprise you.

Diamond, Dyola, Rit, Tintex and Sunset Dye, all colors, at WALLACE'S, the Leading Drug Store.

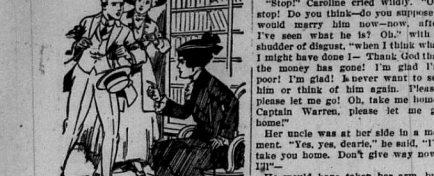
"And now, ma'am," he observed, "that part of the business is over. My niece is a poor girl. She needs somebody to support her and look out for her. She's got that somebody, we're all thankful to say. She's engaged to



"You got my letter?" she cried.

Mr. Malcolm here. I understand from Steve that Malcolm's been mighty anxious to have the weddin' day hurried along. I can't say as I blame him. And I think the sooner they're married the better. Now, how soon can we make it, Mrs. Dunn?"

Caroline gazed at her guardian in horrified amazement. "Why!" she cried. "You—you— What do you mean by such—"

"Don't be an idiot, Caro," cut in her brother. "I told you to be sensible, Captain Warren's dead right."

"Steve, you stay out of this." There was no misunderstanding the captain's tone. "When I want your opinion I'll ask for it. And, Caroline, I want you to stay out too. This is my trick at the wheel. Mrs. Dunn, what d'you say? Never mind the young folks. You and me know that marriage is business, same as everything else. How soon can we have the weddin'?"

Mrs. Dunn had apparently nothing to say—to him. She addressed her next remark to Caroline.

"My dear," she said, in great agitation, "this is really too dreadful. For—er—guardian of yours appears to think he is in some barbarous country—savages about. Come, Malcolm, take her away."

"No," Captain Elisha stepped in front of the door. "She ain't goin', and I'd rather you wouldn't go yet. Let's settle this up now. Well, Mr. Dunn," turning to the groom to be, "you're one of the interested parties—what do you say?"

Malcolm ground his heel into the rug. "I don't consider it your business," he declared. "You're butting in where—"

"No, no, I ain't. It's my business, and business is just what it is. There's a business contract between you and my niece. We want to know how soon it can be carried out, that's all."

The young man looked desperately at the door, but the captain's broad shoulders blocked the way toward it. He hesitated, scowled, and then, with a shrug of his shoulders, surrendered.

"How can I marry?" he demanded sullenly. "Confound it! My salary isn't large enough to pay my own way decently."

"Malcolm!" cried his mother warningly.

"Well, mater, what the devil's the use of all this? You know— By Jove, you ought to!"

"Hold on, young feller! I don't understand. Your wages ain't large enough, you say? What do you mean? You was goin' to be married, wasn't you? Caroline, don't you say a word. You say—you"—addressing Malcolm—"that you can't support a wife on your wages. You could scrape along, couldn't you? Hey? Couldn't you?"

Malcolm's answer was another scornful shrug. "You belong on Cape Cod," he sneered. "Mater, let's get out of this."

"Wait! Put it plain now. Do I understand that you ca'late to break the engagement because my niece has lost her money? Is that it?"

"This is ridiculous," Mrs. Dunn proclaimed. "Every sane person knows, though barbarians may not"—with a venomous glare at the captain—"that in engagements of the kind in which my son has shared a certain amount of —er—financial—er—that is, the bride is supposed to have some money. It is expected. Of course it is! Love in a cottage is—well, a bit passe. My son and I pity your niece from the bottom of our hearts, but—there! Under the circumstances the whole affair becomes impossible. Caroline, my dear, I'm dreadfully sorry, dreadfully! I love you like my own child. And poor Malcolm will be heartbroken—but—you see."

Stephen, who had been fuming and repressing his rage with difficulty during the scene, leaped forward with brandished fist.

"By god!" he shouted. "Mal Dunn, you cad"—

His uncle pushed him back with a sweep of his arm.

"Steve," he ordered, "I'm runnin' this ship." He gave a quick glance at his niece and then added, speaking rapidly and addressing the head of the Dunn family: "I see, ma'am. Yes, yes, I see. Well, you've forgot one thing, I guess. If there's nothin' in marriage but business, then an engagement is what I just called it, a business contract, and it can't be broke without the consent of both sides. You wanted Caroline's money; maybe she wants yours now. If she does, and there's such a thing as law, why, perhaps she can get it."

"That's the talk!" cried Stephen exultingly.

"Stop!" Caroline cried wildly. "Oh, stop! Do you think—do you suppose I would marry him now—now, after I've seen what he is? Oh," with a shudder of disgust, "when I think what I might have done I— Thank God that the money has gone! I'm glad I'm poor! I'm glad! I never want to see him or think of him again. Please, please let me go! Oh, take me home! Captain Warren, please let me go home!"

Her uncle was at her side in a moment. "Yes, yes, dearie," he said, "I'll take you home. Don't give way now! I'll—"

He would have taken her arm, but she shrank from him.

"Not you," she begged. "Steve!"

The captain's face clouded, but he answered promptly.

"Of course—Steve," he agreed. "Steve, take your sister home. Mr. Sylvester's got a carriage waitin', and he'll go with you, I don't doubt. Do as I tell you, boy—and behave yourself. Don't wait; go!"

He held the door open until the hysterical girl and her brother had departed. Then he turned to the Dunns.

"Well, ma'am," he said dryly, "I don't know's there's anything more to be said. All the questions seem to be settled. Our acquaintance wa'n't so awful long, but it was interestin'. Knowin' you has been, as the feller said, a liberal education. Don't let me keep you any longer. Good afternoon."

Then Mrs. Dunn bethought herself of a way to make their exit less awkward and embarrassing.

"My heart!" she said, gasping and with a clutch at her breast. "My poor heart! I—I fear I'm going to have one of my attacks. Malcolm, your arm—quick!"

With an expression of intense but patient suffering and leaning heavily upon her son's arm she moved past Captain Elisha and from the room.

That evening the captain stood in the lower hall of the apartment house at Central Park West undecided what to do next. He wished more than anything else in the world to go to his niece. He would have come to her before—had been dying to go to soothe, to comfort, to tell her of his love—but he was afraid. His conscience troubled him. Perhaps he had been too hard.

The elevator descended, the door of the cage opened, and Stephen himself darted out. The captain caught him as he passed.

"Here, boy!" he exclaimed. "Where's the fire? Where are you bound?"

His nephew, brought thus unexpectedly to a halt, stared at him.

"Oh, it's you!" he exclaimed. "Humph! I'm bound—I don't know where I'm bound. I'm going to the club, I guess, or somewhere. Anyhow I won't stay with her." I told her so. Silly little idiot! I'll never speak to her again. I told her so. She"—

"My heart!" she said, gasping.

"Here! Belay! Stop! Who are you talking about?"

"Caro, of course. She"—

"You've run off and left her alone—tonight? Where is she?"

"Upstairs—and crying, I suppose. She doesn't do anything else. It's all she's good for. Selfish, romantic"—

"Eighth floor," he commanded.

The door of the apartment was not latched. Stephen, in his rage and hurry, had neglected such trifles. The captain opened it quietly and walked in. He entered the library. Caroline was lying on the couch, her head buried in the pillows.

"Caroline, dearie," he faltered, "forgive me for comin' here, won't you? I had to come. I couldn't rest, thinkin' of you alone in your trouble. I know you must feel harder than ever toward me for this afternoon's doin's, but I meant it for the best. I had to show you—don't you see? Won't you try to forgive the old feller that loves you more'n all the world? Won't you try?"

"I forgive you?" she repeated incredulously.

"Yes. Try to, dearie. Oh, if you would only believe I meant it for your good and nothin' else! If you could only just trust me and come to me and let me help you. I want you, my girl, I want you!"

She leaned forward. "Do you really mean it?" she cried. "How can you, after all I've done, after the way I've treated you and the things I've said? You must hate me. Every one does. I hate myself. You can't forgive me! You can't!"

His answer was to hold out his arms. Another moment and she was in them, clinging to his wet coat, sobbing, holding him fast and begging him not to leave her, to take her away; that she would work, that she would not be a burden to him—only take her with him and try to forgive her, for he was real and honest and the only friend she had.

And Captain Elisha, soothing her, stroking her hair and murmuring words of love and tenderness, realized that his labor and sacrifice had not been in vain; that here was his recompense—she would never misunderstand him again; she was his at last.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Rejection.

WHEN the apartment was given up and Captain Elisha and his wards moved to the little house in Westchester county, Annie came with them. Mrs. Moriarty came once a week to do the laundry work. Caroline acted as a sort of inexperienced, but willing, supervising housekeeper.

The house had been procured through the kind interest of Sylvester. Caroline took a domestic science course at a university. She could not quite understand how her uncle retained the valuable paintings of their old home. One day at her request her uncle told her the true story of Mr. Pearson's relations with her father. Caroline wrote to Pearson apologizing for her conduct, but she got her uncle's promise not to invite Pearson to call. However, the captain forgot all about it, and Pearson appeared. As he turned in at the front walk Caroline came out of the door. They met face to face.

It was a most embarrassing situation, particularly for Caroline, yet, with feminine resourcefulness, she dissembled her embarrassment to some extent and acknowledged his stammered "Good afternoon, Miss Warren," with a cool, almost cold, "How do you do, Mr. Pearson?" which chilled his pleasure at seeing her and made him wish fervently that he had not been such a fool as to come. However, there he was, and he hastily explained his presence by telling her of the captain's invitation for that day, how he had expected to meet him at the station and, not meeting him, had walked up to the house.

"Is he in?" he asked.

No, Captain Elisha was not in. He had gone to see a sailboat man. Not hearing from his friend, he concluded the latter would not come until the next day. "He will be so sorry," said Caroline.

He was turning to go, but she stopped him.

"You mustn't go, Mr. Pearson," she said. "You must come in and wait. Captain Warren will be back soon, I'm sure."

Pearson was reluctant, but he could think of no reasonable excuse. So he entered the house, removed his overcoat and hat and seated himself in the living room to await the captain's return.

They were deep in the discussion of the novel when Captain Elisha walked into the living room. He was surprised, stating his feelings at their mildest, to find them together, but he did not express his astonishment. Pearson did not take the next train for the next. Instead, he stayed for dinner and well into the evening, and when he did go it was after a prompt acceptance of the captain's invitation to "come again in a mighty little while."

Pearson came again a week later and thereafter frequently. The sessions with Cap'n Jim, the hero of the novel, and his associates were once more regular happenings, to be looked forward to and enjoyed by the three.

In June two very important events took place. The novel was finished, and Stephen, his sophomore year at an end, came home from college. He had been invited by some classmate to spend a part of his vacation with them on the Maine coast, and his guardian had consented to his doing so. But the boy himself had something else to propose.

"Say," he said, "I've been thinking a good deal while I've been away this last time. Now, the way I look at it, this college course of mine isn't worth while. And the kind of work I want to do doesn't need university training. I want to be down on the street, as the governor was. If this rubber company business hadn't knocked us out I intended as soon as I was of age to take that seat of his and start in for myself. Well, that chance has gone, but I mean to get in some way, though I have to start at the foot of the ladder. Now, why can't I leave college and start now? It will be two years gained, won't it?"

Captain Elisha seemed pleased, but he shook his head.

"How do you know you'd like it?" he asked. "You've never tried."

"No, I never have, but I'll like it, all right. I know I shall. It's what I've wanted to do ever since I was old enough to think of such things. Just let me start in now, right away, and I'll show you. I'll make good, you see if I don't."

That evening the captain made a definite proposal to Stephen. It was briefly that, while not consenting to the latter's leaving college, he did consider that a trial of the work in a broker's office might be a good thing. Therefore if the young man wished he could enter the employ of a friend of Sylvester and remain during July and August.

The novel, the wonderful tale which Captain Elisha was certain would make its author famous, was finished that very day in June when Stephen came back from New Haven.

The advance copy, the first one, was ready early in September, and the author, of course, brought it immediately to his friends. They found the dedication especially interesting, "To C. W. and E. W., consulting specialists at the literary clinics, with grateful acknowledgments." Probably Captain Elisha was never prouder of anything, even his first command, than of that dedication.

And the story, when at last it appeared for sale, was almost from the beginning a success, and, most important of all perhaps, it sold and continued to sell. There was something in it, its humanity, its simplicity, its clearly marked characters, which made a hit. Pearson no longer needed to seek publishers; they sought him. His short stories were bid for by the magazines, and his prices climbed and climbed. He found himself suddenly planted in the middle of the highway to prosperity.

The novel being out of the way and its successor not yet far enough advanced in plot or construction for much discussion, the "literary clinics" were no longer as frequent. But Pearson's visits to the Warren house were not discontinued. All summer long he had been coming out once and usually twice a week. Captain Elisha had told him not to stand on formality, to come any time, and he did. On most of these occasions Caroline came to the captain at home, but if only Caroline was there he seemed quite contented. The captain was planning a glorious Thanksgiving. At least it would be glorious to Mrs. Dunn, who had spended Thanksgiving day and several days at his own home in South Denboro. He would not leave Caroline, of course; she was going with him, he would be there, though he would not come until Thanksgiving day itself. Sylvester also would be of the party. He seemed delighted at the opportunity. Pearson was asked and had accepted. His going was so far a settled thing that he had commissioned Captain Elisha to purchase a stateroom for him on the Fall river boat, for, of course, the captain would not consider her traveling the entire distance by train. A day or two later Pearson announced that he had decided not to go.

"Hey?" Captain Elisha could scarcely believe he had heard correctly. "You can't go—to South Denboro?"

"No."

"Why not, for the land sakes? Come here! Let me look at you."

He took the young man by the arm and led him, almost by main strength, close to the lighted window of the station.

"Humph!" he grunted after a moment's scrutiny. "You've made up your mind; I can see that. Have you told Caroline? Does she know?"

Pearson smiled, but there was little mirth in the smile. "I think she agrees with me that it is best," he observed.

"Humph! She does, hey? I want to know! Look here, Jim! Have you and she"—

He got no further, for Pearson broke away and, with a hurried "Good night," strode up the platform to meet the city bound train. Captain Elisha entered the house by the back door, a remnant of South Denboro habit, and saw his niece, a shadowy figure, seated by the window. He crossed to her side.

"Well, Caroline," he said cheerfully, "I'm home again. Dearie, I just met Jim Pearson. He tells me he's decided not to go on this cape cruise of ours. He said you agreed with him 'twas best he shouldn't go. Do you mind tellin' me why? Have you and he had a fallin' out?"

Still she was silent. He sighed. "Well," he observed, "I see you have, and I don't blame you for not wantin' to talk about it. I'm awful sorry. I'd begun to hope that— However, we'll change the subject."

"Uncle," she said, "you know I always want to talk to you. Mr. Pearson and I have not quarreled, but I think—I think it best that I should not see him again. It would only make it harder for him, and it's of no use."

Captain Elisha sighed again. "I guess I understand, Caroline. I presume likely I do. He—he asked something' of you, and you couldn't say yes to him. That was it, I suppose.

"And yet you sent him away. Why?"

Needn't tell me unless you really want to, you understand," he added hastily.

"But I do. I ought to tell you. Uncle Elisha, Mr. Pearson asked me to be his wife."

The captain gave no evidence of surprise.

"Yes," he replied gravely; "I judged that was it. And you told him you couldn't, I suppose. Well, dearie, that's a question nobody ought to answer but the one. You didn't care for him enough, I suppose. Caroline, you don't care for anybody else, do you? You don't still care for that other feller, that"—

"Uncle," she sprang up, hurt and indignant, "how can you?" she cried. "How could you ask that? What must you think of me?"

"Please, Caroline," he protested; "please don't. I beg your pardon. I was a fool. I never better. Don't go. Tell me the real reason. Now tell me. Was it that you couldn't care for Jim enough?"

"I—I like Mr. Pearson very much. I respect and admire him."

"But you don't love him. I see. Well," sadly, "there's another one of my dreams gone to smash. However, you did just right, dearie. Feelin' that way, you couldn't marry him, of course."

"That was not the reason," she said in a low voice.

"Hey?" He bent toward her. "What?" he cried. "That wa'n't the reason, you say? You do care for him?"

She was silent.

"Do you?" he repeated gently. "And yet you sent him away. Why?"

She faltered, cried to speak and then turned away. He put his arm about her and stroked her hair.

"Don't you cry, dearie," he begged. "I won't bother you any more. You can tell me some other time—if you want to. Or you needn't tell me at all. It's all right; only don't cry."

"I mustn't be so silly," she said. "I had made up my mind to tell you everything and I shall. My not caring for Mr. Pearson was not my reason for refusing him. He would marry me. poor as I am. And perhaps I—perhaps I should say yes if things were different. I know I should say yes and be happy. But I can't and I won't! I won't! I suppose you think I have been perfectly satisfied to let you take care of me and of my brother and give us a home and all that we needed and more, but I have not been contented with that, nor has Steve. He and I have made our plans, and we shall carry them out. He will leave college in the spring and go to work in earnest. Before that time I shall be ready to teach. I have been studying with just that idea in view. I haven't told you before, uncle, but one of the domestic science teachers at the university is a girl I used to know slightly. She is going to be married next year, and if all goes well I may be asked to fill her position when she leaves. Steve and I have planned it all. His salary at first will be small, and so will mine, but together we can earn enough to live comfortably, and more than enough when he earns more perhaps we may be able to repay a little of all that you have given us. We shall try. I shall insist upon it."

"Caroline," he asked, "is that the reason you sent Jim away? Did you tell him that? Did you tell him you wouldn't marry him on account of me?"

"No, of course I did not!" indignantly. "I'd turn over your dad's sent on the stock exchange to him. Not give it to him, you know—not right off—but let him try, and then, if he makes a good fist at it, he'll have it permanent. I ain't told him, and I don't want you to, but it's what I've planned for him. and"—

"Wait! Wait, uncle, please! The Stock Exchange seat? Father's seat? I don't see—I don't understand."

"Yes, yes," eagerly; "your pa's seat. I've meant it for Steve. There's been chances enough to sell it, but I wouldn't do that. 'Twas for him, Caroline, and he's goin' to have it."

"But I don't see how—why, I thought"—

By the light from the doorway he saw that she was gazing at him with a strange expression. She looked as if she was about to ask another question. He waited, but she did not ask it.

The Stock Exchange seat had been a part of her father's estate, a part of her own and Steve's inheritance. How could Captain Warren have retained such a costly part of the forfeited estate in his possession? For it was in his possession; he was going to give it to her brother when the latter left college. Who was this mysterious man her father had defrauded? She had never wished to know before; now she did. And the more she pondered the more plausible her suspicion became.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Stock Exchange Seat.

NOVEMBER weather on Cape Cod is what Captain Elisha described as "considerable chancy."

"The feller that can guess it two days ahead of time," he declared, "is wastin' his talents.' He could make a livin' prophesyin' most anything, even the market price of cranberries." When Caroline, Sylvester and the captain reached South Denboro after what seemed, to the two unused to the leisurely winter schedule of the railroad, an interminable journey from Fall River, the girl thought she had never seen a more gloomy sky or a more forbidding scene.

But she kept her feelings hidden on her uncle's account. The captain was probably the happiest individual in the state of Massachusetts that morning. He hailed the cabin's approach to Sandwich as the entrance to Ostable county, the promised land, and from that station on excitedly pointed out familiar landmarks and bits of scenery and buildings with the gusto and enthusiasm of a schoolboy.

At Denboro he pointed out Pete Shattuck's livery stable, where the horse and buggy came from which he had been the means of transporting Graves and himself to South Denboro.

"See!" he cried. "See that feller holdin' up the corner of the depot with his back, the one that's so broad in the beam he has to draw in his breath afore he can button his coat. That's Pete. You'd think he was too sleepy to care whether 'twas today or next week, wouldn't you? Well, if you was a summer boarder and wanted to hire a team you'd find Pete was awake and got up early. If a ten cent piece fell off the shelf in the middle of the night he'd hear it, though I've known him to sleep while the minister's barn burned down. The parson had been preachin' against horse trottin'. Maybe that sermon was 'responsible for some of the morphine influence."

Sylvester was enjoying himself hugely. Captain Elisha's exuberant comments were great fun for him. "This is what I came for," he confided to Caroline. "I don't care if it rains or snows. I could sit and listen to your uncle for a year and never tire. He's a wonder."

Dan, the captain's hired man, met them with the carriage at the station, and Miss Baker met them at the door of the Warren home. The exterior of the big, old fashioned, rambling house was inviting and homelike in spite of the gloomy weather, and Caroline cheered up a bit when they turned in at the gate. Five minutes of Miss Abigail's society and all gloom disappeared. One could not be gloomy where Miss Abbie was. Her smile of welcome was so broad that, as her employer said, "it took in all outdoor and some of Punkhorn Neck," a place which, he hastened to add, "was forgot durin' creation and has sort of happened of itself since."

Abbie conducted Caroline to her room —old fashioned, like the rest of the house, but cozy, warm and cheery—and, after helping in the removal of her wraps, seized her by both hands and took a long look at her face.

"You'll excuse my bein' so familiar on short acquaintance, dearie," she said, "but I've heard so much about you that I feel's if I knew you like my own folks. And you are own folks, ain't you? Course you are! Every one of Lisha's letters have had four pages of you to one of anything else. I begun to think New York was nothin' but you and a whole lot of ten story houses. I declare, you're almost prettier than he said. May I kiss you? I'd like to."

She did, and they were friends at once.

The house and buildings were spotless in paint and whitewash; the yard was raked clean of every dead leaf and twig; the whole establishment was so neat that Caroline remarked upon it.

"It looks as if it had been scoured," she said.

"Um-hm," observed her uncle, with a gratified nod; "that's Abbie. She hates dirt worse than she does laziness, and that's sayin' a whole lot. I tell her she'd sandscrap the weather vane if she could climb up to it. As 'tis, she stays below and superintends Dan while he does it."

Miss Baker had planned that her young guest should sit in state, with folded hands, in the parlor. She seemed to consider that the proper conduct for a former member of New York's "four hundred." At one time she refused to sit in the parlor and be "company." She insisted upon helping. Miss Baker protested and declared there was nothing on earth to be done, but her guest insisted that if there was not she herself must sit. As Abbie would have as soon thought of attending church without wearing her jet earrings as she would of sitting down before dinner, she gave in after awhile and permitted Caroline to help in arranging the table.

"Why, you do fust rate!" she exclaimed in surprise. "You know where everything ought to go, just as if you'd been settlin' table all your life. And you ain't, because Lisha wrote you used to keep hired help, two or three of 'em, all the time."

Caroline laughed.

"I've been studying housekeeping for almost a year," she said.

"And they teach that—at school?" she demanded. "And take money for it? And call it science? My land! I guess I was brought up in a scientific household, then. I was the only girl in the family, and mother died when I was ten years old."

After dinner she consented to sit for a time, though not until she had donned her Sunday best, earrings and all. Captain Elisha and Sylvester sat with them, and the big fireplace in the sitting room blazed and roared as it had not since its owner left for his long sojourn in the city.

Caroline's mind was busy with the suspicion which her uncle's words concerning his future plans for Steve had aroused. She had thought of little else since she heard them. The captain did not mention the subject again. Possibly on reflection he decided that he had already said too much. And she asked no more questions. She determined not to question him—yet. She must wait and then ask some one else—Sylvester.

FIGHTING THE APHIDS

EXPERT ADVICE IN CONTROLLING GARDEN PEST.

Plant Lice Do Injury to House Plants as Well as Outdoor Crops, But Insects Can Be Destroyed by Special Sprays and Soap Solutions.

In view of the very considerable damage done to plants under many conditions of cultivation, by aphids, and the fact that in many cases the cause of the trouble is not recognized, the following account of the nature of the injury produced, the life history of the insects and the methods of control used in connection with the best under various circumstances, may be found useful by a great number of growers of house plants, garden and field crops. The matter is from a crop protection leaflet written by William R. Ross, of the Dominion Entomological Laboratory, Vineland Station, Ont.

Aphids, or plant lice, are the small, soft-bodied insects commonly found clustering, usually in dense colonies, on almost all kinds of plants. Most of our common species are green; others again are reddish, brown or black; and some kinds are covered with a white powdery or woolly material. They are insignificant in appearance, but because of their tremendous powers of multiplication they are capable of inflicting serious losses to important greenhouse, orchard, garden and field crops.

The presence of aphids is frequently indicated by a curled and distorted condition of the leaves. The leaves and other affected parts may turn yellowish, wilt and in extreme cases may die. These injuries are caused by the insects extracting, by means of their piercing, sucking mouth parts, the life-juices or sap from the plants.

Commencing with the eggs, which are deposited on the food plants in autumn and which hatch in spring about the time vegetation is reviving, a typical aphid life-cycle is as follows: All the insects which hatch from the winter eggs develop into wingless females. This first generation is then rapidly succeeded by brood after brood of winged and wingless plant lice until by fall as many as thirteen or fourteen generations may have arisen. All the spring and summer forms are females which, without the intervention of a male, give birth to living young. As the summer forms may commence to reproduce seven to ten days after birth and as each female may produce over fifty young, it is not at all surprising that frequently the plant lice become so numerous that it is almost impossible to insert a pin into the infested portion of a plant without touching an insect. In the fall, true males and females appear and after pairing the females deposit the winter eggs.

Many species of aphids have the peculiar habit of abruptly changing their food plants. For example, the cosy apple aphis by means of winged forms deserts the apple during early summer and migrates to plantains, on which hosts the species feeds and breeds. In the fall the return migration to apple takes place.

Stomach poisons such as Paris green and arsenate of lead are wholly ineffective against plant lice. These insects can only be destroyed by the application of sprays such as soap solutions and tobacco preparations which kill by contact.

Among the best contact insecticides for aphis control are:—

Whale Oil Soap.—This must be dissolved in boiling water. For greenish aphids, it should be used in the strength of one pound to six gallons of water; for brown or black aphids, a 1-4 solution should be used.

Nicotine Sulphate. — Commercial nicotine sulphate (40 per cent.) preparations are sold by nearly all seedmen. They may be used in combination with any of our garden or orchard sprays. When used alone, two pounds of dissolved soap should be added to every 40 gallons of spray.

Brief directions for the control of plant lice under greenhouse, garden and field conditions are presented herewith:

Greenhouse Plants. — Spray with or better still fumigate with any of the standard nicotine preparations (liquids and papers) sold by seed merchants. In using these commercial preparations follow the manufacturer's directions.

Truck Crops.—Spray as soon as the aphids are in evidence with whale oil soap, or nicotine sulphate, one ounce to eight gallons of water. Take great pains to drench undersides of the leaves.

Field Crops. — In districts where plant lice are destructive to pease early sowing should be practiced and only early maturing varieties should be grown. Early pease are rarely injured by plant lice.

Apart from the suppression of volunteer growth in the fall no special effort need be made to control grain aphids. In Canada, grain crops are rarely seriously injured by aphids.

Orchard Trees.—Apple and cherry orchards which are more or less subject to aphis injury every year should be treated as follows: Postpone the first or so-called dormant application until just before the buds break and then use lime sulphur solution (40 per cent.) with the lime sulphur wash (3-4 pint nicotine sulphate to 80 gallons of spray). Aphids often become reinfested with the green apple aphis an additional application of nicotine sulphate should be made during the summer.

Spray with nicotine sulphate (one ounce to eight gallons) or whale oil soap as soon as the aphids appear and before the leaves become curled.

Spruce trees infested with the gall-louse should be sprayed with a solution composed as follows: Chapine of nicotine sulphate, 75 gallons of water and three to four pounds of soap some time before the latter part of April.

PREVENT MILK PLANT WASTE.

Managers of Dairy Establishment Should Work to Avoid Spoilage.

A quart of milk wasted now is about twice the loss it was a few years ago and the financial loss, though great, is even less serious than the waste of this essential food. Managers and employes of market milk establishments should take every possible precaution to prevent waste. Here are a few suggestions along this line:

Keep the shrinkage as low as possible by close attention to leaks, spillage and slopping.

Avoid milk piping as much as possible, since considerable milk will stick to pipes at the end of the run.

Have milk vats so that they can be drained readily.

Drain cans and all containers well after dumping the milk.

Utilize exhaust steam wherever possible for heating the building and providing hot water for various dairy operations.

Exterior of Well-Equipped Dairy House.

Avoid extra steam piping by proper arrangement of rooms, thus avoiding losses due to condensation of steam.

Keep steam valves and joints well packed.

Keep doors of refrigerator room closed. Do not work the refrigerator more than necessary and do not leave lights on.

Avoid use of milk pumps wherever possible by adopting the gravity-flow system. Extra labor is required for cleaning pumps.

Avoid unnecessary labor by convenient arrangement of equipment and rooms and through use of labor-saving devices.

Other points which deal principally with mechanical topics are included in the recommendation, all of which have received a degree of investigation and experience. By issuing a monthly letter on timely matters to the milk trade, the dairy division seeks to raise the plane of milk handling efficiency. It makes official information available to those who are able to put it into immediate use and should assist in reducing operating costs as well as waste of dairy products.

Rotate to Prevent Disease.

Practically every farm crop is attacked by some disease which increases in activity when the same crops are grown year after year on the same soil. Root rot becomes more prevalent when corn follows corn. Smut in corn is intensified with continuous culture. Potatoes are often attacked by several plant diseases if they are grown on the same soil two or more years in succession. With proper crop rotations the diseases do not have the same host plant for two successive years, which prevents them from gaining a headway.

KEEP WELLS CLEAN.

How the Water May Become Unwholesome.

If properly located, built and protected, dug wells are more likely to be permanently satisfactory than any other kind, but to insure the safety of the water supply they require cleaning occasionally. Even in protected wells dust and other foreign matter, which may pollute the water, are likely to gain entrance at the top, and the washing in of clay and silt with the ground water may make the supply unwholesome.

The first step in cleaning a well should be inspection of the curb, which, if weak or defective, may make entrance dangerous. This examination may be made more thoroughly, and even the bottom of the well may be observed by the aid of a beam of sunlight reflected into the well by a looking-glass. Next lower a lighted candle to determine if carbonic acid gas has accumulated in the bottom of the well. Complete or partial failure of the candle to burn indicates that it is dangerous to enter the well. If found safe to enter a ladder should be lowered and the curb from top down scrubbed with wire or other stiff brushes and rinsed thoroughly. The well then should be pumped as low as possible, and any mud, moss or other debris should be scraped up into pails and removed.

After thorough cleaning the well should be allowed to fill and then be pumped out rapidly. This operation may be repeated to advantage two or three times, and often the whole work results in a freer, larger-yielding well. Many wells can be drained by hand pumping, but in other cases a power pump is necessary.

Unless there are special reasons for so doing there is little use in attempting to disinfect wells with chemicals. The volume of water receiving the chemical solution cannot be known definitely, and the results are neither certain nor permanent.

Record Price for Geldings.

At the Manitoba Provincial Spring Fair at Brandon recently, T. A. Elder, of Brandon, and formerly of Newmarket, Ont., provided the sensation of the show with his team of Clydesdale geldings, Donald and Sandy, which took first place in their class as a team, and were later sold to McKay Bros., of Carmangay, Man., for the record price of $2,000. Mr. Elder's geldings, though first as a team, when shown in singles were first and third, the Ontario team, purchased by Graham Bros. at the last Guelph Winter Fair, being second and fourth. The Ontario team was purchased for half the amount for Mr. Elder's team at Brandon. During the fair many other good horse sales took place, including that of the Percheron stallion "Sensational," at $2,500. Quite a number of stallions were hired for club purposes during the week. In all, the interest shown at the Brandon show, went to indicate a feeling of optimism for the future of the horse business in the prairie provinces, as horsemen from all parts of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba were present, as was a few from Ontario.

British Friesians.

At a recent competition held under the auspices of the Clarence County Agricultural Society, Cleveland, the Willow herd of British Friesians, owned and developed by Mr. and Mrs. Carter, of Cholmondeston, won first prize in open competition in the class for herds on farms under 100 acres. The herd also for the best six cows (with official milk yields) in any one herd, first prize was awarded to Mr. Carter's six British Friesians. The total production of the six (as given by the Cheshire County Milk Recording Society) for the year 1918 was 66,961 pounds milk, or an average of 11,160 pounds per cow. The six Friesians averaged 1,240 quarts per head more than the average of the six dairy Shorthorns, which obtained second prize.

Find Tuberculosis In Cow.

It is difficult for anyone to detect tuberculosis in a cow by her appearance. Some cows, apparently healthy, may be affected with this disease. An ordinary layman can detect tuberculosis in a cow about as well as can a professional man.

If a cow is in an advanced stage of tuberculosis she will usually cough, be poor in flesh, have a dull expression in her eyes and appear sluggish. The milk from such a cow should not be used for either animals or human beings.

The safest method is to have a herd tested for tuberculosis by a capable veterinarian. This test may be administered by the owner or by any other careful person, but it can readily be seen that the results of such a test would not be official.

Warm Drinking Water Best.

Warm drinking water for the dairy stock will save feed and the dairy the milk flow. It saves feed because it does not draw on the vitality of the cow as does cold water. It benefits the milk flow because a cow will not reach her maximum production unless she drinks her abundantly. This she will not do if it is ice cold.

Protection For Live Stock.

Poultry, hogs, and dairy cattle, to give best results, must be housed, especially at night, as the weather gets frosty. All buildings used for housing such animals should be put in good condition, and where necessary remodeled along approved lines.

Double-acting Churn.

Turning the handle of an American inventor's double-acting churn revolves the paddles in one direction and the barrel in the other.

ENGLAND'S "SHOP STEWARDS"

Movement Has Become a Very Important Part of Labor Situation.

The shop stewards' movement in England has become a very important part of the labor situation there. Before the war the shop stewards were the official representatives of the unions in the workshops, but they were quite minor delegates, whose business was practically confined to seeing that new employes were members of the unions and that the old members kept their contributions up to date. During the war, however, their functions have grown tremendously and there has also grown up an organization of unofficial shop stewards, who exercise vastly greater powers than the official delegates.

By an agreement of the unions with the Ministry of Munitions there were to be no strikes during the war, hence, the calling of strikes devolved upon the unofficial shop stewards. This was the beginning of their power. They then extended it by forming committees of shop stewards in various factories and from this progressed to forming workers' committees, the shop stewards being the committee members, covering an entire locality. These committees are now frequently recognized by the employers in individual factories, and negotiations are in progress for their general recognition on a national basis. The originators of the movement hope thus to organize a new trade union system in England, with the workshop as the basis for industrial action. A labor correspondent of the London Times says of the movement:

"In the minds of most of the advanced element in the shop stewards' movement the right basis for industrial action is a workshop basis and organization in the labor movement should, in their view, be built up on an all-grades workshop basis. They seem to develop workshop organization apart from the unions, both as a lever for bringing about amalgamation and as a means of securing control over industry.

"The unofficial shop stewards' movement, as a whole, seeks the overthrow of capitalism and the realization of the workers' control over industry. The most active section are the industrial unionists of the Socialist Labor party, but they are only a small minority of the whole, and there are many different theoretical points of view represented in the movement, while the bulk of the adherents have hardly a definite theoretical point of view at all. Workshop organization has come naturally as the result of wartime experience and is certain of an important permanent place in trade union machinery, but there is no likelihood that the existing unions will be overthrown, though there is every chance that there will be big amalgamations among them, and that the shop stewards and workshop organization generally will receive full recognition in the future structure of trade unionism in the engineering and shipbuilding industries."

Aircraft for Surveys.

Among the peace time possibilities of aircraft are forest fire patrol and aerial photography. It is now expected that fire patrols by flying boats will be established during the current year by the British Columbia Forest Branch and by one or more of the forestry protective associations in Quebec, assisted by the Quebec Government. The St. Maurice Forest Protective Association is the leader in this respect in the east, as the British Columbia Forest Branch has proved in the west. It is believed that there are large possibilities also in connection with aerial fire patrol on Dominion lands in the west, through the Dominion Forestry and Parks Branches. Many men, whose experience in aviation overseas should qualify them to express thoroughly practical opinions, state that, beyond question, these things are eminently feasible.

Similarly, there is undoubtedly a large field for developments along the line of actual photography, both in conjunction with forest protection and independently. The recent address of Col. Cull before the Geodetic Society of Ottawa showed some of the possibilities of aircraft in furthering the line of work with which the Geodetic Survey is partially concerned.

The possibilities in connection with forestry work are also very great. There are vast areas of relatively inaccessible lands in all the provinces, where only fragmentary data are available as to drainage and topography, so as to the exact composition and volume of the forests. As a result of war developments, the importance of our forests as a national economy is now recognised as never before. An adequate knowledge of the character, location and extent of the forests of Canada is essential to the proper administration and exploitation of this vital resource.

The Commission of Conservation made a survey of the forest resources of British Columbia and Saskatchewan, although the data available as to extensive areas were of the most fragmentary character. Similar work in other provinces is proposed, as rapidly as the necessary funds are secured. The prosecution of such projects would be enormously simplified, and the results would be much more accurate and valuable, if necessary work on the ground could be supplemented by systematic surveys made by means of aerial photography. Such surveys might of course serve other public purposes as well. This suggests the extreme desirability of co-operation between all agencies interested, Dominion and Provincial, as well as private.—Conservation.

How to Remedy Clay Soils.

Physically clay is a mass of very fine, mute grains, stuck together in a cemented substance, and is comparably like putty in texture. Water is impervious to it.

As a soil clay is very unsuitable, for the land gets in a waterlogged condition, and is cold; but as a constituent it is very valuable, as it retains the moisture and holds plants firm. Clay contains a small amount of food substance, and can be absorbed in very small quantities. It also retains the properties of decaying manures.

To remedy heavy clay soils by making it loose and friable, ashes and lime dung liberally applied would have very beneficial results.

Cuttings.

Willows, dogwood and currants are easily propagated by cuttings taken while the plants are dormant and planted as soon as the ground can be worked.

NEW PARIS WRAPS APPEAL TO WOMEN

Evening Cloak of Smoke-Gray Charmeuse and Model of Venetian Red Bure.

THICK CORD NECK ORNAMENT

Idea Taken From Habits Worn by Choir Boys—Craze Raging for Long Jet Earrings—The High Dog Collar.

Sketched this week is one of the loveliest evening cloaks it is possible to imagine. It is one which was recently designed by Paquin for the peace-conference festivities. The material of this regal wrap was deep smoke-gray charmeuse with a lining of gleaming silver tissue and fringes composed of long silver tassels on the wide, cape sleeves.

The whole thing, writes a Paris correspondent, was so exceedingly original and rich that one felt in the presence of a fairy-queen-garment. And yet the color was so subdued and subtle that the wrap might quite well be worn going to a restaurant dinner or an ordinary theater. It was only when it was thrown open and the dazzling lining revealed that its richness made itself felt.

This is a leading note of many of the new Paris models for evening wear. There are still considerable difficulties connected with getting about in the evening. Quite unexpected people find it necessary to walk to their friend's house, or even to the theaters, instead of driving, as formerly.

Taxicabs are few and hard to find. There are still stringent rules connected with private automobiles. The metros and omnibuses are crowded to overflowing, hence the frequent necessity of walking in evening dress. For this reason our best dressmakers are creating evening wraps which can, as indicated, be worn in the street at night without attracting undue notice.

Satins and velvets in soft neutral tints are very much in demand, but the linings of these demure wraps are something to dream about. I have seen gorgeous gold and silver tissues worked over with brilliant silks and beads and then converted into linings for theater coats.

Metallic Threads, Glistening Beads.

I have also seen exquisite effects produced by the introduction of metallic threads and glistening beads on fine Chantilly lace, the latter being mounted over an underlining of brightbued silk. The outline of the Paquin wrap is very new and it represents the latest notion of a famous dress artist. As you will see, the sleeves are so wide that they give the impression of capes, while the collar is exaggeratedly large and vague in outline.

This model would look charming if copied in black, with black jet tassels as a fringe for the sleeves and a lining of some bright-colored satin or brocade, or it might be made of a soft camel's hair cloth, the jet tassels being retained and a lining of Chinese blue satin being introduced. I saw a driving wrap fashioned on very much the same lines as the model here illustrated.

In this case the material was pale beige cashmere, with a lining of brocaded silk which showed blue flowers on a dull rose ground; there was a heavy fringe of beige silk tassels on either sleeve and a large roll-over collar of beaver fur. An admirable driving wrap, I can assure you.

The second model, full-length figure, shows a quaint early spring wrap made of Venetian red bure, with a row of gray bone buttons down one side and handsome embroideries worked in rough gray wool. This is a Beer model and one which has been greatly admired. The outline is simple, the wrap falling in long straight lines, but the sleeves are distinctly novel in outline, spreading out at the wrist in leg-o'-mutton fashion.

Collar Muffles the Neck.

Here again you have a "vague," very large collar which muffles up the neck and makes a delightful frame for the face. The combination of Venetian red and gray is very fashionable just now. It is seasonable and cheerful, two excellent qualities. In Worth's showrooms I recently saw a splendid driving wrap made of Venetian red camel's-hair cloth which had a deep cape-collar of sable and a lining of tete de negre satin embroidered in black, white and dull blue silks.

This wrap was very long, reaching to the hem of the dress, and at the shoulders it seemed ample, even unusually bunchy; but the hem clung in about the ankles and gave the peculiar outline which is typical of 1919.

Quaint Early Spring Wrap in Venetian Red Bure, With Handsome Embroideries of Rough Gray Wool.

A lovely young actress—one of the adored beauties of Paris—had just launched a most effective novelty. This novelty takes the form of a thick cord, with long tassel, of bright scarlet silk. In front there was an antique ornament, in plaque form, suspended from the cord, and at the back a big tassel weighted it down and made a splendid flash of color. This idea was taken from the scarlet cords and tassels worn by choir boys in some churches on ceremonious occasions.

The color of the cord and tassel was the brightest and most vivid scarlet, the ornament in front being of an antique nature, with a slight suggestion of "church" in its composition. On the head was one of the new cut jet bands which are placed very low on the forehead, almost touching the brows, and which completely circle the head and hair. The best cut jet is used for these pretty bands.

Draw Hair Right Off Forehead.

It becomes more and more the fashion to draw the hair right off the forehead and to arrange it very high on the top of the head, the only soft curls showing being those which thrust themselves forward over the ears. This style of headdress is very distinguished but rather trying to any one who is not possessed of a small nose and pretty profile. But all sorts of women, with all sorts of profiles, are adopting the fashion of drawing the hair away from the forehead, severely. And nowadays the hair is only very lightly waved, if waved at all. Side by side with this fashion we have a revival of "cropt" effects, the sort of headdress that Mrs. Vernon Castle has made so fashionable.

The hair is not really cut short, but it is skillfully tucked away at either side to give a cropt outline. "Headache bands" are again very popular; quite large bands of soft silk or metallic tissue which are folded round the head and tied at one side in a coquettish bow.

Craze for Jet Earrings.

There is a craze for ultralong jet earrings raging in Paris at this moment. Think of dainty cut jet pear drops, suspended from miniature chains of diamonds or seed pearls. These earrings are so long that they touch the neck. They are exceedingly decorative and with certain afternoon and evening dresses they give splendid results.

I am not in favor of long earrings in the day time, in the street, nevertheless they are the fashion, and it is a fashion which seems likely to develop into an absolute rage. Cut jet in various forms is popular just now. At a recent important "first night" I saw a well-known Parisian beauty wearing a high dog collar made entirely of cut jet, and this with a fragile costume of palest rose chiffon. The strong touch of black was rather startling, but the ensemble was good, the note of jet being repeated in a square comb which held the high loops of fair hair in place. Cut-jet plaques attached to black silk cords are often thrown over a light-colored house dress, a long black silk tassel hanging low at the back.

"But Not the Six Hundred."

Well, the Princess Pats are back. The Carmania brought them to Halifax. Only 32 men of the regiment as it now stands were of that body of Canadians who in 1914 corrected the Germans in their queer assumption that the men of the British dominions would not fight for the Mother Country. The rest of them either lie in Flanders or have been invalided home, for the original Pats —but it is not for us to attempt to recount what they did, how they fought and how they suffered. Their career of battle is a subject to be treated with becoming humility by some gifted historian, one with some poetry and fire in him, who can translate the spirit as well as the deeds. But we could not fail to note the return, if it is only the nominal return, of the Princess Pats. If ever men saw wrong that cried to be righted and rushed to do that thing it was these Canadians who left their farms and their stores and their offices to lay down their lives for something the German fondly believed was merely a name.—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

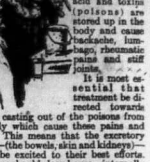
Wash The Kidneys!

After Bad Colds or Influenza Look to Kidneys and Bladder!



Owing to bad colds, over-eating or intemperance, or to the after effects of influenza uric acid and toxins (poisons) are stored up in the body and cause backache, lumbago, rheumatic pains and stiff joints.

It is most essential that treatment be directed towards prompt casting out of the poisons from the body which cause these pains and aches. This means that the excretory organs—the bowels, skin and kidneys—should be excited to their best efforts. Every one should clean house—internally —and thus protect one's self from many germ diseases, by taking castor oil or a pleasant laxative such as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which are made of Mayapple, aloes and jalap. Take these every other day. This will excite efficient bowel action. If you suffer from backache, irritation of the bladder and the kidneys, shown by the frequent calls to get out of bed at night, considerable sediment in the water, brick-dust deposit, perhaps headache in the morning, you should obtain at the drug store "Anuric" (antiuric acid), first put up by Dr. Pierce.

To build up the strength and improve the blood, take an iron tonic such as "Irontic," manufactured by Dr. Pierce, to be had in tablets at drug stores, or some good herbal tonic such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, made from wild roots and barks without alcohol, and put up in tablets or liquid.

PART CAPE AND PART COAT

A practical and graceful garment, part cape and part coat, is among the endless interpretations of the cape that have answered the demand for spring-time wraps. It is in fact a short, full coat with flowing sleeves and a girdle, having a long cape lined with figured satin hanging from the shoulders. The full collar and bands on the sleeves are of satin.

SOME FASHION NOTES.

The new vest collars are made of pique.

Tailor-made suits are almost classically plain.

Iridescent embroidered tulle is popular for evening robes.

The spring hats display brims wide at the sides.

The best waists have their collar ideas repeated in their cuffs.

'Tis said the new skirts will hang six inches from the ground.

For sport wear are the Buster Brown waists developed in voile.

Long tight sleeves are usually seen on the simpler woolen frocks.

The deep oval neck line is filled in with a tiny vest of sheer material.

Organdie is still excellent for frocks, but little trimming is used.

Dr. George Adam.

One of the most recent acquisitions to Canada from Scotland is George Adam, of Montreal. He has been appointed to a public life in the British Isles, and has rapidly come to the front here. He is a house friend of Harry Lauder, and a very warm friend of David Lloyd George. Two of his best lectures are entitled "A Trip to the Front with Harry Lauder," and "A Familiar Picture of David Lloyd George."

We are leaving it to the local committees to say which one of these lectures they prefer to hear. Both are great, but the majority of the committees are choosing to hear of the great British Premier who has played such a vital part in the winning of the War.

Adam lectures on the second evening of the week.

THE PETWORTH DAM AGAIN BLOWN UP

One-half of the Dam has been Rendered Useless

On Sunday morning at three o'clock the Petworth dam near Verona was blown up with dynamite by some unknown person or persons and damaged very considerablyy. One half of the dam was smashed and rendered useless. The structure is the property of The Napanee River Improvement Co., and for some time it is contended that it has been inconveniencing the farmers of the district. The claim was made a short time ago that the farms in the neighborhood would be rendered useless, as the rains had caused the water to rise to such a height that it had flooded the fields and caused the road between Moscow and Bell Rock to become impassable for motor vehicles and the cheese factory in the latter village was flooded with two feet of water.

On the other hand, B. S. O'Loughlin, secretary of the Improvement Company, contended that "as the dam is but twenty inches high with some fall above it the owners contend that the flooding was due to natural causes." In addition he claims that for the past five years the dam has been entirely removed before the ice is out of the river in the spring and that there was no such structure as the Petworth dam at that time of the year. "The Company's cut in the river bed is three feet deep, twenty feet wide and about forty rods long," contended Mr. O'Loughlin. "This is open in addition to natural conditions being restored."

Nevertheless, some irate person has evidently put out of commission whatever was doing the damage in the neighborhood, and it is now expected that conditions will be improved. It is understood that a time fuse was used, and it will, therefore, be very difficult to apprehend the party guilty of the offense. It is not known whether officers of the law are working on the case.

This is not the first time that Petworth dam has been dynamited, as the wrath of the neighborhood has been stirred up on several previous occasions and the dam was blown up. It is expected that a full investigation will be made.

SOUND ADVICE RE OVERALLS

"You have been given much advice by manufacturers and Jobbers about the future price of overalls--some good and some bad

We have in mind one wholesaler who only a few weeks ago advised their trade not to buy stating that prices would be much lower.

Now we have a bit of advice to give,—That is the immediate purchase of all the overalls you can use at to-day's prices, and we leave the future to demonstrate whether our advice is good or bad."
